John Scott

John Scott directs the retirement savings project at the Pew Charitable Trusts, a nonprofit, nonpartisan research organization that uses evidence-based solutions to today's pressing policy issues. The project conducts research to understand the barriers to retirement savings in the United States and how assets can be preserved in retirement. Prior to joining Pew, Scott taught public policy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and continues to hold a research associate professorship at UNC. He also has extensive experience in retirement policy and in the financial services industry. Scott holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from Cornell University, a law degree from the Pennsylvania State University, and a bachelor's in economics from Swarthmore College.