

Anne Tergesen

Anne Tergesen is a reporter covering retirement in The Wall Street Journal's Life & Work and personal finance departments in New York. Her stories often explore how retirement and preparing for retirement are changing today. She writes frequently on topics relating to 401(k) plans and retirement savings, spending and legislation. She also writes about employee benefits, longevity and aging. Before joining the Journal, Anne worked for BusinessWeek magazine, covering personal finance. Together with colleagues, she recently won a Front-Page Award from the Newswomen's Club of New York and was a finalist for a Gerald Loeb Award. In 1996, she was awarded a Knight-Bagehot Fellowship at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism and won a Best of Knight-Bagehot Award in 2006. Anne started her career covering local news at the Philadelphia Inquirer.

