

Suzanne Woolley

Suzanne Woolley is a personal finance writer for the Wealth team at Bloomberg News in New York, covering a wide range of financial topics around saving and investing. Prior to joining Bloomberg's Wealth team in 2018, where she initially focused on the world of ultra-high-net-worth investors, Suzanne was a personal finance writer and editor on Bloomberg's dedicated digital team, spearheading multi-platform projects that focused on retirement and investing.

Suzanne joined Bloomberg in 2009 after the company's acquisition of BusinessWeek, where she headed up the magazine's personal finance section. Soon after joining Bloomberg, she led the relaunch of the company's personal finance online channel. Prior to joining Businessweek in 2005, she was an editor and writer at Money magazine, which she joined after an even earlier stint at BusinessWeek as its markets and investments editor. She has served on the boards of the Financial Women's Association and the Deadline Club. Suzanne has represented Bloomberg on panels, television, video, radio, and Twitter Spaces, and tweets as @WealthWatch.